RMI2 adds 5 clients to incubator program

By Coloradoan staff

The Rocky Mountain Innovation Initiative, or RMI2, on Monday formally announced the addition of five new clients to its incubator program.

Among the new innovative startup companies introduced by the RMI2 board of directors are: Eckstein Diagnostics, GenGreen, MetLogic, Physical Activity Innovations and Zero Hero Events.

Eckstein, founded by Julia Inamine and Torsten Eckstein, specializes in diagnostics for infectious diseases.

GenGreen is a social media company with the largest database of verified environmental and healthy-living businesses in North America.

MetLogic provides customized climate and weather products with state-of-the-art weather models.

Physical Activity Innovations is developing footwear-based systems that help motivate users to increase their daily physical activity.

And ZeroHero Events is a zero-waste renewable energy company providing recycling services to events across the nation.

Each of the new companies meets RMI2's goal to accelerate the success of high-impact scientific and technology start-up companies in Northern Colorado.

RMI2 will provide the companies with facilities, access to a network of mentors and advisers, support services, business connections, networking opportunities and education.
